Political Science

Kubik, R. Smith, Turner, Yoon.

Major: Political Science courses – 115, 117, 118 or 161; 235; 239; 461 (culminating experience); five others with at least three courses at the 300 level. Cognate: Mat 217. Comprehensive evaluation, with passing grade. Total of 9 major courses + 1 cognate = 10 courses

Minor: Political Science courses – either 115, 117, 118 or 161; 239; any three others. Total of 5 minor courses. Minors may, if desired, emphasize American Politics, International Politics, or Political Thought.

PIS 115. Introduction to American Politics. A survey of the major concepts in political science with an emphasis on understanding politics in the United States. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 117. Politics of the Modern Age. The character and politics of the modern West – its preconditions and presuppositions, its development and its current state, its universalizing quality and the resistance to it. Satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.B. Cannot be taken by students who have completed or are concurrently enrolled in His 111 or ID 113, 114, or 215. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 118. Comparative Politics. A survey of one of the major subfields of the discipline focusing on fundamental concepts explored in cross-national comparisons. Includes a substantial political economy component.

PIS 160. Special Topics.

PIS 161. Democracy. A survey of the ideas, institutions and controversies of political science. Special emphasis is given in this course to the example of the United States. In combination with Eco 161, satisfies Modern Society LADR and General Degree Requirement IV.A. and B. Not open to students with prior credit in 115.

PIS 162. Modern Politics I: Power and Ideas. Examination of the political and economic ideologies of the modern West. Topics include democracy, capitalism, imperialism, nationalism, socialism and communism. In combination with His 162, satisfies the Modern Societies and Other Cultures LADRs or GDR IV.A, IV.B and IV.C.

PIS 163. Politics, Society and Film. Explores modern social institutions, cultural controversies, and theories of politics as portrayed in movies and documentaries. Additional focus on the use of film as a political tool. In combination with Psy 163, satisfies the Modern Society LADR or GDR IV.A. and B.

PIS 211. Politics and Society in Contemporary Africa. Studies history, politics, society, economy, and culture in contemporary Africa. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118, 161 or permission of instructor. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A. or satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.C.

PIS 212. American Foreign Policy. Examines post-World War II American foreign policy and the challenges that lie ahead. Offered alternate years. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161.

PIS 213. Introduction to Public Policy. An introduction to the tools of analysis and challenges inherent in public policy formation. Cost benefit analysis and game theory are introduced as ways of understanding issues related to the environment, poverty, law, and freedom. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Fulfills an elective requirement for the major.

PIS 215. American Political Thought. Analysis of political thought from Puritans to present period. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 217. Latin American Politics. Current Latin American politics studied within its historical, cultural, and international contexts. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161 or permission of instructor. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A or satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.C.

PIS 218. European Politics. An examination of the governmental process in the major European countries of Britain, France, and Germany, including frequent comparisons to American politics. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 219. Middle Eastern Politics. An examination of the political systems of the Middle East, including the role of Islam and the Arab-Israeli conflict. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A or satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.C.

PIS 220. Politics and Society in Contemporary Asia. An examination of the complexities of the region focusing on history, culture, politics, economy, security, and international relations. Prerequisite: Either 115, 117, 118 or 161 or permission of instructor. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A or satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.C.

PIS 222. U.S. Legislative Process. An examination of the Congress and the state legislatures in their governmental and political contexts. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 225. Women in the Developing World. Examines the effects of gender inequality in education, health, culture, economy, media, religion, and politics on women in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.C.

PIS 226. Urban Politics. An examination of politics within cities, neighborhoods, and interpersonal networks, with special attention to social, human, and financial capital. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Offered in alternate years.

PIS 231. World Politics. The foreign policy-making process; problems of the world community and how nations attempt to deal with them. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS. 232. The Problem of Order: Law, Politics. An examination of the uses and abuses of law, and of formal vs. informal systems of order. Case studies of the “lawless” 19th century Western U.S., modern Peru, and community rules. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161.

PIS 235. History of Political Thought. An examination of representative political theorists from Plato to Marx. Identical to Phi 338. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Partially satisfies General Degree Requirement IV.A.

PIS 236. Contemporary Political Thought. An examination of major political theorists of the recent past. Identical to Phi 236.

PIS 238. Tocqueville in America. An examination of Democracy in America, one of the most important works written about the conditions needed for democracy and the inevitable difficulties it faces. Some off-campus travel. Offered in Spring Term in alternate years.

PIS 239. Research Methods. The range of phenomena dealt with by political and other social scientists; methods of data collection and analysis.

PIS 260. Special Topics.

PIS 315. Political Sociology. An examination of the sociology of power and community at the national and international levels. Identical with Soc 315. Offered alternate Fall terms. Prerequisite: any one of PIS 115, 117, 118, 161, or a sociology gateway course.
PIS 320. American Political Thought, 1950 to Present. Analysis of contemporary U.S. political theory. The course will serve as an elective for non-majors. (Replaces PIS 237.) Offered Spring Term.

PIS 321. Natural Resources Policy. Application of current theories in collective action and policy formulation to evaluate various policy solutions. Case studies involving air, water, and endangered species. Prerequisite: 213. Offered in alternate years.

PIS 322. Political Parties and Interest Groups. An examination of the role of political parties and interest groups in the U.S. political process, including candidate recruitment, campaign finance, and policy making. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161.

PIS 325. Campaigns and Elections. A study of the criteria voters use in making choices in elections, and how the electoral system structures these choices. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118, 161.

PIS 327. Field Study, Washington, D.C. Interviews with governmental, interest group, and political party officials and individual research. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Offered Spring Term in alternate years.

PIS 328. The Challenge of the American Founding. Examines the people, ideas, and institutions foundational to our current republic. Special emphasis is placed on the political theory of two monumental works from this time period: the Federalist Papers and Alexis de Tocqueville’s Democracy in America. The tools of constitutional political economy and collective action theory are used to distill principles from the American founding that might guide future attempts to constitute a self-governing society. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161. Fulfills an elective requirement for the major.

PIS 331. International Law and Organizations. Origin, nature, development, structure, and functions of international law and organization. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161.

PIS 335. International Political Economy. An examination of the political and economic forces shaping the international system today, centering on the issue of order vs. justice at the global level and exploring topics such as the changing role of the state, trade competition, technology transfer, aid and debt, the global ecology, revolution and counter-insurgency, and the changing international security (war) system. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 181 or 161. Offered alternate years.

PIS 337. Field Study of the United Nations, New York. Briefings and independent study of the handling of world issues in and through the UN. Prerequisite: 115, 117, 118 or 161.

PIS 357. Internship. Participation in the operations of a governmental or nongovernmental political agency identified by the student in consultation with the department. Offered on demand.

PIS 359. Social Movements. An examination of theories of movements of protest, reform, and revolution, and of resistance to change. Comparison and contrast of case studies, including movements such as abolition, temperance, civil rights, and environmentalism. Identical to Soc 359. Alternate Fall Terms. Prerequisites: PIS 115, 117, 118 or 161, or a sociology gateway course.

PIS 360. Special Topics.

PIS 370. Directed Study. One unit.

PIS 461. Senior Seminar. Discussion and writing on selected aspects of political science.

PIS 471. Independent Study. Supervised individual research and writing.